Agents Fail To Recover Salaries

Supreme Court Sustains County Judges' Decision

Lynn Smith and Miss Mary Buechley Denied Salaries for Work

ENDS LONG FIGHT

Judge May Disapprove Any Appropriation Made By Quorum Court

LITTLE ROCK, Nov. 4.—(AP)—Lynn Smith, farm agent, and Miss Mary Buechley, home demonstration agent of Hempstead county were unsuccessful in their efforts to secure a reversal of a Circuit court verdict in an attempt to force the county to pay them salaries alleged to be due but which were disallowed by the County Judge.

The Hempstead Quorum Court had appropriated money to pay the county's part of the salaries but the court's action was overruled by the County Judge. The Supreme Court sustained the action of the County Judge under Act No. 347 of 1927, giving the County Judge authority to disallow such claims.

Attack Sentences Affirmed

The 18-year prison sentences imposed upon Frank Bethel and Mike Wallace, Mississippi youths convicted of an attack upon a school teacher, were upheld by the Supreme court today on the same charge but had on a reversal from the higher court. Reversing of the appeal of Ben Evers, Arkansas county negro under death sentence for the murder of City Marshal Perry Miller at DeWitt several months ago, was denied. The action ends Evers' chances for escaping the chair unless the governor extends clemency.

Tourists Buy Flowers From Indian Girl

GLACIER PARK, Mont., Nov. 4.—Way up in the Rockies of Glacier National Park there is an Indian flower girl who appears among the summer tourists with armful of bear flowers gathered from the mountainside. The copper-colored maiden makes her bend money in this way.

Every spring the black bear, emerging from their winter's hibernation, paw up the roots of this plant, hence the name of bear flower. The bear's rooting keeps this flower pretty well cultivated on the mountains and every other year, at least, they grow in profusion, with their long white feathery plumes standing out prominently.

Says Drinks Will Stop Prison Riots

Chisolm Thinks Inmates Should Have Beer Or Wine Daily.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—If inmates of American prisons were given a litre of wine or a mug of beer a day, there would be no outbreaks, in the opinion of D. Gordon Chisolm, who has just resigned as American member of the international prison commission.

In the 20 years he has served as a penologist, Chisolm has visited 200 prisons in the United States and many in foreign countries. He has received thousands of letters from wardens and prisoners, and in the course of his studies, has gone as far as to live in a prison cell.

"My one standing conclusion from all this work," he said, "is the prodigious effect of the Volstead act in increasing crime. Dry propaganda to the effect that there are fewer prisoners is as far from the truth as anything could be."

"A litre of wine a day is allowed to every inmate of French prisons. They have no riots. A similar ration of beer is poured out in German prisons, and the prisoners there serve out their terms in peace and quiet and become better men."

Chisolm believes that the Volstead act has led directly to overcrowding of prisons in two different ways. First, he contends, it has increased murders and other crimes of violence; second, it has led to a great increase in the use of narcotics and has filled many jails with dope addicts.

Four Year Old Boy Is Appendicitis Sufferer

Jack Wesley, four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Lawhorne, was operated on last night for appendicitis and this morning is reported as resting as well as could be expected. The little fellow had complained Friday, of feeling badly but Saturday and yesterday morning was apparently all right again. Sunday afternoon about four o'clock he was suddenly taken ill. A physician called ordered him taken to the hospital and on examination disclosed a ruptured appendix. The operation was performed early last night.

Pure Breds Given Royal Reception

Crowd of Enthusiasts On Hand To Welcome Shipment.

The first car load of pure bred bulls ever shipped into Hempstead county were given a royal welcome here Saturday afternoon, being placed on exhibition on the streets and shown until late in the afternoon when they were turned over to those who will have charge of them.

Of the ten received, seven go to bull clubs in various sections of the county while three were purchased individually. Chamber of Commerce officials stated Saturday night that this shipment indicated that other purebreds. Both bulls and cows would be coming in from time to time.

Community Sing for Sunday Next

Second Sunday Affair Here Will Be Biggest of Year Report.

A community singing for Hope Sunday afternoon next, to be held at the City Hall, is announced today by a number of lovers of vocal music and plans are practically perfected to make it the most complete session of its kind held this year. Among the organizations already secured for the day will be the Stamps quartette and the Vaughan quartette, the last named from Willis Point, Texas, and now touring this section of the county.

According to Wash Hutson, one of the leaders in promoting the attraction, he has assurances from many sections of the country of attendance at the meet and looks for the largest crowd yet to turn out.

'Doughnut Tree' Grown In Glacier National Park

GLACIER PARK, Mont., Nov. 4.—There's an evergreen tree that grew almost "like a doughnut" in the Two Medicine Valley of Glacier National Park. The twisted condition of this tree was due to the constant strong winds that blow off the mountainsides, giving it its shape when it was a mere sapling.

Fox Sells Film Holdings To Rivals

Interest Taken Over By Warner Brothers For Millions.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—(AP)—William Fox Film corporation Sunday announced completion of the sale of its company's stock holdings in First National Pictures corporation to Warner brothers for a sum in excess of $10,000,000.

By the terms of the transaction Fox films relinquished title to more than 25,000 shares of First National stock which it valued on its books at approximately $3,821,072.

Fox said that Fox Film corporation will apply such profits as accrued from the sale in liquidating all costs now being carried on his company's books for silent motion pictures.

Jury Frees Man Who Killed Mother To End Suffering

"Echoes of Verdict Will Be Heard Around World" Prosecutor Says

DELIBERATELY DONE

Man Admitted Killing and Said Hoped He Had Done Right

DRAGUIGNAN, France, Nov. 4.—(AP)—Richard Corbett was acquitted by a jury here today on a charge of murdering his invalid mother last May.

Corbett, his own lawyer at the trial, admitted the killing was premeditated but affirmed he did it to end his mother's sufferings and hoped that he had done right, even though he had broken the law. The public prosecutor, in a short but fervent speech, requested a verdict establishing Corbett's guilt.

"We do not ask for the excessive penalty," he said, "but this startling case has developed the tremendously vital question whether society can permit one human being to take the life of another without punishment."

"Your verdict will echo around the world. The state must contend this man had no right to kill." Then, with woman's sobs echoing through the stifling courtroom and telegraph messenger boys wearing silent slippers dashing in and out to serve the 50 reporters in an adjoining room, the prosecutor demanded the minimum punishment, a sentence of five years in solitary confinement.

Corbett, sitting with head bowed, took apparently but little interest in the proceedings.

Thrown Off Truck, Seriously Injured

Woman Unconscious After Striking Head On Concrete.

Mrs. Den Stroud, wife of a farmer living a few miles north of Hope, is in a critical condition following a fall from a truck late Saturday, striking her head against a concrete curb and seriously injuring her.

Mrs. Stroud, with a baby in her arms, was riding the truck coming to town. The driver swerved the vehicle sharply to avoid striking another car at a street intersection, the sudden turn throwing Mrs. Stroud from the car. The baby was uninjured.

Sunday afternoon Mrs. Stroud was still unconscious and attending physicians feared concussion of the brain as result of the fall.

Masonic Grand Lodge To Meet

Grand Chapter of O. E. S. Also To Convene Nov. 18-20.

The Eighty-eighth communication of the Grand Lodge of Arkansas, Free and Accepted Masons, and the fifty-fourth annual session of the Grand Chapter of Arkansas, Order of Eastern Star, will be held November 18, 19 and 20 at Albert Pike Memorial Temple in Little Rock. The grand lodge will meet on the later two days while the grand chapter session will take the three days. Several hundred persons are expected to attend each meeting.

The grand lodge session will open at 10 a. m. Tuesday, November 19, with the address of Hamp Williams of Hot Springs, grand master. Reports of officers, committees, the finance board and pension board will be given that afternoon.

W. H. Denham of Little Rock, grand orator of the Grand Lodge, will give the annual oration on the same night before a joint meeting of the grand lodge and the grand chapter.

Election of officers of the grand lodge will take place on the morning of November 20. They will be installed and business will be completed that afternoon.

The first meeting of the grand chapter of the Eastern Star will be held on the afternoon of November 18, officers of Little Rock and North Little Rock chapters being an escort of honor to that grand officers for the formal opening of the grand chapter.

At Murder Trial of Texas Judge

Here's a view of the Weatherford Texas courtroom where Judge R. H. Hamilton of Amarillo is now on trial on a murder charge in connection with the killing of his son-in-law, Tom Walton. Young Walton was shot by Judge Hamilton, indicated by arrow, when he learned of Walton's secret marriage to his daughter, Theresa, at right, while they were students at the University of Texas. Judge J. E. Carter is presiding.

Officers Return With Clark Negro

Brought Back From Detroit Will Face Burglary Charge.

Deputy Sheriff Will Porter and Police Chief Clarence Baker returned Saturday afternoon late from Detroit, having in custody one "Hun" Clarke, negro, wanted here for burglary and jailbreaking. Clarke was lodged in jail at Washington, from where he made his escape several months ago, and is scheduled to go on trial in Circuit Court this week.

The officers report the trip uneventful, with the prisoner giving them no trouble until they reached Little Rock. Leaving there Saturday morning on the last lap of their return journey, the negro in some manner slipped the handcuffs off, lowered the glass in the car door and made a dive for liberty. One of the officers seized him by the leg and held on until the car could be stopped and the other officer got out to aid in shoving Clark back through the aperture.

Arkansas Thomas Cat Suspends Publication

HOT SPRINGS, Nov. 4.—The Arkansas Thomas Cat, a weekly "breezy and picturesque" magazine, edited by Jefferson Davis Orser, will close its doors forever, according to an announcement by Mr. Orser today. Mr. Orser founded the paper in Hot Springs more than 40 years ago, and for many years was looked upon as dealing only with the bright and cheerful things that happened as he saw them. Mr. Orser, now quite an aged man, says that failing health is the reason for suspending publication of the once popular weekly magazine. Whether negotiations for the sale of the paper were attempted is not known.

State To Attack Hamilton Defense

Rebuttal Testimony In Amarillo Slaying Will Be Given Today.

WEATHERFORD, Tex., Nov. 4.—(AP)—Prosecutor put the final touches today on rebuttal testimony which they hope will break down the self defense plea offered last week by R. H. Hamilton, on trial for the slaying of his son-in-law, Tom Walton, Jr., in Hamilton's Amarillo law office last May.

The defense completed its direct testimony Saturday afternoon with Hamilton's own story of the events that led up to the shooting. The lawyer insisted he did not know that Walton was his son-in-law and that he did not intend to kill him but had to shoot in self defense.

The state thus far sought to show only that Walton went to Hamilton's office and was killed in scuffle with the lawyer, who is a former member of the Texas Supreme Court Commission of Appeals.

The defense has sought to show that Hamilton killed Walton when he was in apparent danger. To this end a number of students, who knew Walton and Hamilton's daughter, Theresa, when the two were married secretly while attending the University of Texas, testified that Walton made sinister threats against the attorney because he fancied Hamilton opposed, or would oppose his relationship to Theresa. Boasts that he was a former Capone gangster in Chicago and several threats to kill Hamilton were made.

Michigan Students Jailed On Charge Of Selling Whiskey

Officers Say Rum Smuggled In To Dormitories From Canada

FACULTY APPROVES

Raid Follows Placing of Fraternities On Probation

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 4.—(AP)—A charge that three students were working their way through the University of Michigan by selling liquor to other students was made today by police after a raid Saturday night in which it is asserted they found a case of wine and a case of whiskey in the dormitory, confiscating both.

Hurold McKee, 24, of Pittsburgh, is being held in the county jail and two others who names are withheld are being sought. The liquor, police said, was brought in from Canada and smuggled into the dormitory under buttoned overcoats.

Sergeant Louis Foley and detective Clifford West declared that a number of telephone calls ordering liquor were received while they were at the place, the officers answering the calls.

The raid is part of a drive begun by local officers after five fraternities had been placed on probation by the University for tolerating intoxication at dances.

Alleged Bomber Refuses To Talk

Won't Make Statement Until Police Let Him Have Lawyer

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 4.—(AP)—Police and U. S. deputy marshals were today questioning Frank Milzo, 30-year-old peddler in connection with the exploding of dynamite on street car tracks. He refused to make a statement until he had consulted a lawyer.

The arrest is the first the police have made in connection with the night bombings of street cars and tracks and of homes occupied by non-union street car workmen.

Two Jailed for Borger Murder

Former Officer Accused In Connection With Holmes Killing.

BORGER, Tex., Nov. 3.—(AP)—The Holmes murder mystery which persuaded Governor Dan Moody to declare martial law in this oil town and which has lain dormant since that time, eclipsed all other considerations in Borger Sunday. Officers questioned the first two men to be arrested and charged with the crime.

Sam Jones, former deputy, constable and Jim Hodges, manager of a boiler works here were charged with the crime after almost two months of investigation by state rangers. District Attorney Clem Calhoun and national guard officers.

Jones was one of the first men arrested when the troops came to Borger. He was held without bond on a liquor charge but with the expiration of martial law was allowed bond. Deputy Sheriff "Red" Burton returned him to Borger from New Mexico Friday on another liquor charge and upon arrival here lodged the murder complaint.

Hodges was arrested at his home here. Hodges, who was district attorney at the time of his assassination, once prosecuted Hodges on a theft charge. Officers investigating the case were very close mouthed about the latest developments but indicated they felt they were nearing a solution which they expected would have "wide ramifications."

State rangers early in the investigation said they had affidavits showing a conspiracy existed between some county and city officials and the criminal element. Later Governor Moody and his representatives here insisted that the oil county and city administrations resign as the price of restoration of civil law. Jones was one of those forced out of office.

Se confident was District Attorney Clem Calhoun that the investigators were on a right track he predicted that a jury would punish Holmes' assassins before next year.

Beyond Hodges' denial of guilt or knowledge of the crime no word came from the prisoners.

Hempstead To Go To Polls Dec. 1

Tracks Are Torn Up When Train Derailed

SPECIAL ELECTION

Call Authorized By County Board

Petitions With Necessary Names Are Received By Board

TO BEGIN CAMPAIGN

Local Plans Bear Approval of The State Department

Lempstead county will go to the polls Tuesday, December 10, and vote on the question of establishing a county unit system of education here.

This announcement was made today by E. E. Austin, county superintendent. It was made on the authority of the County Board of Education, which last week recognized petitions said to have been signed by several hundred persons seeking to have the special election called.

The Modern Way
The county unit is regarded by educators as a necessary step in reorganizing Arkansas' public schools. It is endorsed by the State Department of Education, which sends trained observers into every county where a campaign is to be launched. In its first four attempts, the state department and local school men failed to carry the county unit idea at the polls. Four counties, defeated in succession, although in Mississippi, one of the largest counties in the state, the vote was extremely close.

Last month Pike county approved the county unit, and was the first in the state to vote favorably, with the exception of Little Rock, which has maintained this system for many years.

There will be the first time the county unit system has ever been submitted to the voters of Hempstead, and local school men are optimistic that the local territory will be next to Pike in adopting a modern educational system.

Austin's Statement
The advantages of the county unit method of administration were pointed out in a brief statement by County Superintendent Austin. He said:

"It is the most efficient means of bringing popular education to every child in the county without any increase in taxation. A standard common and high school will be brought within reach of every child in the county. The advantages offered in any one school will be made available in all of them."

Local school men expect to launch a campaign in behalf of the county unit, in every township. The campaign will begin immediately and will run through to election day, with speakers covering every school district and voting precinct.

Negro Woman Held On Murder Charge

Uses Pocket Knife With Deadly Effect On Rival.

MINNIE PHELPS, negress, is in jail at Washington facing trial for murder in connection with the fatal stabbing of Emma McFadden at a dance in the negro section here Thursday night. The McFadden woman dying Saturday.

The women had had trouble before, it only being a few weeks since the dead woman paid a fine for knifing the Phelps woman. The two met again Friday morning at a darktown social affair and this time it was the Phelps woman who wielded the trusty blade.

The woman charged with the killing, according to Patrolman Downs, who arrested her, readily admitted stabbing her rival, remarking that it was done to "get even" with her.

She was held in the city jail until after the death of the stabbing victim when she was turned over to the county authorities and transferred to Washington. Disagreement over the attentions of some dusky Lothario is said to have been the cause of the trouble.

State Censures Bingham's Action

Resolution Slightly Toned Down But Still Is Biting

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—(AP)—The Senate today voted a resolution of censure for Senator Bingham, republican, Connecticut for taking Chas. E. Evanson, of the Connecticut Manufacturers Association, into secret sessions of the Senate Finance Committee at the time the tariff bill was being framed. It was the first act of censure in 17 years.

The vote was taken after a protracted discussion during which Bingham defended his action.

Mitchell Urges More U. S. Prisons

$6,500,000 Building Program Advocated To Care for Federal Prisoners.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—(AP)—A six and a half million dollar construction program to care for federal prisoners swollen in number by narcotic and prohibition violators, was proposed to the country Sunday night by Attorney General William D. Mitchell in a radio address over the National Broadcasting System.

"We need first a new federal penitentiary with a capacity of 1,200 to be located in the North Atlantic states," he said. "Second a new industrial reformatory similar to Chillicothe to serve that territory west of the Mississippi river, with a capacity of 1,200. Third, three federal jails or houses of detention—one in the North Central states, one on the Pacific coast and one in the Central South."

"The federal government never has provided jails of its own for jail prisoners, but has rented accommodations, in state and county jails, and it is not proposed at present to go beyond the construction of the three jails mentioned."

"This construction program will cost about six and a half millions, spread over a five-year period. Approved by the budget, this program awaits only the action of congress."

Continuing, he said that another vital improvement was to provide en-

Report of County Home Demonstration Agent of Hempstead County for 1928-29

The following report is submitted to the County Judge, the Justice of the Peace, and voters of Hempstead county for approval of the year's work of the County Home Demonstration Agent for Hempstead county.

The work for the year 1928 has been centered on Food Preservation work. Boys and Girls 4-H Club work and Poultry and Home Grounds.

The three years that I have been in Hempstead county, food preservation work has been stressed more than any other phase, because I feel that it is the most important. A full pantry shelf of canned fruits and vegetables for winter use insures good health and prevents winter colds. Hempstead county is adapted to the trucking industry and each year hundreds of bushels of good vegetables go to waste when the market price drops. If these vegetables were canned for winter use, they would be more valuable than if sold as fresh products. Last year nine carloads of canned fruits and vegetables or 13,500 cases were shipped into this county and sold. Half of this could have been eliminated if the fruits and vegetables that went to waste had been canned. There is not a vegetable known that cannot be canned if the proper methods and equipment are used. In the three years that I have been in this county, thirty pressure cookers and two home result of these demonstrations the only one in the county when I came, and it belonged to the county agent's wife. The reason I mention the number of cookers in the county is that it is necessary to have pressure cookers to safely can meats and protein vegetables. The women that own these cookers have canned this year a total of 1,500 quarts of meat and 3,000 quarts of vegetables. During the year 29 demonstration have been given in canning, 46 of these were meat canning, 33 in canning fruits and vegetables, five in making jelly, and five in making pickles. As a result of these demonstrations the women in the county have canned 15,450 quarts for winter use, insuring a balanced diet and good health for their families.

The show window of our year's work in canning was shown at the Southwest Arkansas Fair this fall. There were 511 entries of canning in the general exhibit, three pantry shelves, each consisting of the amount of canned products necessary for a week during the winter months. There were five community booths with a total of 300 jars in the booths. A total of 900 containers were exhibited at the Fair which is the best canning exhibit ever seen at the Southwest Arkansas Fair.

The boys and girls 4-H Club work has been on a better organized basis this year than ever before. We started in December and organized 18 4-H Clubs in each of these Clubs the members selected a man and woman in the community to assist them with their work. These local leaders are due a great deal of credit for the good club work which has been done in the county this year. Our year's success was shown by the attendance at both our club rally and Farmer's Week. There were over 600 club members and parents that attended the club rally in Hope in April where they were given a recreational and educational program. There were 25 boys and girls who attended Farmer's Week which is the largest number that has ever gone from this county.

There have been a number of outstanding club members this year in both gardening and canning. For their projects, these girls raise vegetables that they are taught to can for winter use. Elmer McWilliams, a first year member sold $777.50 worth of fresh vegetables, canned 111 quarts for home use and used $10 worth of fresh vegetables on table. She won $11.50 in premiums and a prize at the State Fair on her 12-jar exhibit.

In third year canning, Opal Samuels and Audrey Derryberry took all the prizes. Audrey was awarded the county prize by the Allen Garden Tool Company, and Opal took all the prizes at the State Fair in third year canning, amounting to $58 in cash and all her canned products for use at home.

In 4-H poultry club work there were 129 members. Their work is to hatch and raise for home use a flock of standard bred chickens. They are given lessons in feeding balanced rations, culling, and keeping a record of expense. Most of these club members have realized a neat profit on their work. There are several outstanding poultry club members: Ruby Jack Sullivan of Centerville, this year made a profit of $191.56 on her poultry project. She has a flock of 60 white leghorns, and sold 382 dozen eggs during the year, sold 46 fliers and has a good poultry house for winter use.

In addition to their project work, each club member takes clothing and cooking. In clothing they are taught how to make their own clothes at a low cost. There were 78 exhibits in the clothing department at the fair, made by club members this year.

In foods work, the girls are taught how to prepare food to get the most food value from it, which is important to the health of the family.

Poultry work among the flock owners of the county has made rapid progress. Hempstead county won the honor of having the highest production flock in the state. This flock is owned by Mr. and Mrs. Willis Cobb, of near Hope. Their flock of 110 hens, laid 14,318 eggs during this year, making each hen average 223 eggs. The net profit was $3.45 a hen. The other five demonstration flocks kept records and had a neat profit. Through better breeding, balanced feed, housing, and sanitation, we have not only increased the flocks in the county, but a larger net profit on each bird has been made. Poultry as a side line of farming is becoming one of the best cash crops of the year.

A new project has been carried on with turkey raising this year that has caused many people to decide to raise turkeys next year. This work was carried on in cooperation with the Missouri Pacific Poultry Specialist, thirty pressure cookers and two home result of these demonstrations the only one in the county when I came, and it belonged to the county agent's wife. The reason I mention the number of cookers in the county is that it is necessary to have pressure cookers to safely can meats and protein vegetables. A Closeup of Our Envoy to Britain

Here's a striking closeup of General Charles G. Dawes, U.S. Ambassador to Great Britain, who returned to the United States recently for a brief visit. Notice that the general's upside-down pipe is still being used, even after months in London.

IN PAIN, WEAK, NERVOUS, CROSS

But After Taking Cardui, Lady Says She Feels "Better Than In Years."

Huntville, N. C.—"Since I took Cardui, I am no longer bothered with weak, nervous spells," says Mrs. Sam Laughlin, of this place. "For about fifteen years, I suffered from weakness. Sometimes it grew so bad I had to go to bed. I did not have strength enough to walk around the house. I was constantly complaining, and was as nervous and cross as I could be. My back and sides ached, and I was very low-spirited."

"I tried two or three things that were suggested to me, but they did not seem to help. "Someone said 'Try Cardui,' and told me how other women had been helped by it. I consented to take it for a while. Shortly I began to feel stronger. I was hungry at meal-time, and much less nervous."

"This pleased me so much that I continued taking Cardui for several months, and at the end of that time I felt better than I had in years. I slept well and had a good appetite."

THEATRE IN UPROAR WHEN "THE COCOANUTS" SHOWN

Yesterday Paramount uncoiled its first talking film comedy at the Saenger, "The Cocoanuts," with the Four Marx boys, Mary Eaton, Oscar Shaw and what is known technically as a "bevy" of chorus girls. As to the Marxes, or Marx, or whatever they should be called, they repeated all the funny business of their three-year-old musical bit with exceedingly good effect. The audience enjoyed itself hugely and fairly laughed itself silly time after time.

"The Cocoanuts" is funny if you like the Marx Brothers and their broad, bumptious comedy. Without doubt they are bound to keep you laughing most of the time.

-have you driven a Chevrolet Six?

Have you felt the thrill of its six-cylinder performance—so smooth, quiet and vibrationless that you almost forget there's a motor?

Have you known the satisfaction of its six-cylinder reserve power—ready to shoot you ahead at the traffic light, to carry you over the steepest hills, or to speed you along the highway?

And do you know that anyone who can afford any car can own a Chevrolet Six?

If you have never driven a six-cylinder car, it is impossible for you to form any idea of Chevrolet performance from your imagination alone.

Smoothness! No rumble in the body—no tremble in the steering wheel—no vibration to loosen windows and doors!

Flexibility! Power that flows in a silken stream—and never a trace of "lugging"!

Quiet! Hardly a whisper from the motor. You can drive it for hours without the slightest noise fatigue!

But why try to tell you the story when only a ride can give you the facts? Come in. There's a car waiting for you... Now!

THIS HAS HAPPENED
 Bonnie Dundee, "cub" detective, Lieutenant Strawn of the homicide squad of Hamilton, rents a room at Mrs. Rhodes' boarding house to be near Mrs. Emma Hogarth, who has appealed to the police for protection. Dundee meets the other boarders: Mr. and Mrs. Sharp, Daisy Shepherd, saleswoman; Walter Styles, proprietor of a small haberdashery; Norma Paige, his fiancée; Bert Magnus, an amateur scenario writer; Cora Barker, theatre pianist; Henry Dowd, newcomer out of work, and Dusty Rhodes, worthless husband of Mrs. Rhodes.

Dundee learns that Mrs. Hogarth constantly changes her will to name a new favorite. Norma, the latest heiress, introduces Dundee to Mrs. Hogarth after dinner, but he gets only a few minutes chat with her alone. He leaves at 11, promising to return later. He comes back at 12:20 to find her choked to death.

Strawn takes charge of the investigation. Dundee, stationed behind a screen in the murder room, takes notes as Strawn quizzes Dowd. A detective reports that Sevier, former boarder, left town on the one o'clock train, that he ran to catch his train and was hatless. A Mr. Weeks reports having seen a man running down the alley as he went for his car about 12:10 to make a call.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER IX

"Yes I watched him until he disappeared," Dr. Weeks answered. "As soon as the car had backed out of the alley, the man straightened up and ran faster than ever out of the alley into Tenth street."

"In the direction the car had taken?" Strawn asked. Perhaps that car turning briefly into the alley and flashing its headlights, had been a pre-arranged signal.

"No. The opposite direction—toward Maple avenue, the street just north of Chestnut, you know. The car turned toward Chestnut."

"Could you distinguish the make of the car of its occupants?"

"No—neither. In fact, I paid no attention to the car. I was watching the man. If I had had my wits about me and had not been such a hurry to make my call—a pretty sick patient, by the way—I suppose I should have challenged the man, or reported the matter to the police. Or if I had known the man to be a former boarder, an evicted one, I should, of course, have notified Mrs. Rhodes of his strange behavior. I have a high regard for Mrs. Rhodes."

"I'm sure you have, Doctor," Strawn interrupted. "And thank you very much. You've helped us a great deal. You'll be needed for the inquest, of course. . . . By the way, doctor, you say you attended Mrs. Hogarth occasionally during the last three or four years. In your opinion, was she—well, mentally normal?"

The doctor chuckled, then remembered he was in a room where murder had been committed a very short time before, and looked embarrassed.

sed. "One of the shrewdest women I've ever met. Lieutenant Strawn. And the most closemouthed. She never referred in any way to her past life, even refused to give me the name of any doctor who had previously attended her. She had had a serious major operation—abdominal—and I wanted to write her surgeon and ask him a few questions as to what condition he had found, to guide me in treating the old lady. But she absolutely refused to give me any information whatever. A queer woman."

Cora Barker, escorted by the patrolman, appeared in the doorway.

man, but not a crazy woman. I'm sure of that Lieutenant Strawn."

When the doctor left the room, Strawn spoke briefly to Carraway, the fingerprint expert, who was packing his paraphernalia preparatory to leaving.

"Afraid this bunch of prints I've picked up won't help you much, Strawn," Carraway answered. "The murderer was a wise guy—used gloves or a handkerchief. No prints at all on the window frame; wiped clean and none on the trunk locks or the desk drawers. The chambermaid must have dusted in here with an oiled rag some time Saturday, for the desk was clean even of the old lady's fingerprints—except the top of it. I took her fingerprints first thing and they match with those found on the desk. No prints on the keys, either. Found a number of prints on the door inside and out, but since the old lady had a flock of visitors earlier in the evening, I don't think they'll help you much. If the murderer came in by that door, I'll wager he had his wits about him and didn't leave his calling card, since he was so careful everywhere else. But I'll develop the bunch and let you have them for what they're worth."

When Carraway had left, Strawn joined Dundee behind the screen.

"Well, boy, I'm afraid this case is going to be too simple for your tastes," the older detective commented, a gleam of triumphant mirth in his eyes.

Dundee grinned amiably, then remarked, very casually: "I wonder why it took Sevier—if it was Sevier—the doctor saw—so long to run from here to the station? He caught the train, you know. How far is it from the Rhodes House to the Union Station?"

Strawn scowled. "As a matter of fact, it's only about 10 blocks. But that doesn't prove anything. Dundee, Sevier must have known we'd be on his trail, because of the old lady's complaints against him. He wouldn't board a train with swing on him. My idea is that he met a fence somewhere, who undertook to take care of the stuff for him until the police were tired of watching him, or released him on insufficient evidence. Either that, or he hid it somewhere, and then barely had time to make the train he had advertised he was going to take. No flies on Sevier," he added admiringly. "As a matter of cold fact, unless we get more on him than we now have, we shan't be able to get a conviction. If we could find that car—whatever swung his lights full on a running man in an alley is going to have a pretty good picture of that man fixed in his mind. Guess I'd better get the papers to help me. Mrs. Rhodes is holding some reporters at bay downstairs now."

It was more than 15 minutes before Lieutenant Strawn returned from his session with the reporters. Dundee had begun to feel sorry for his fellow boarders, all of whom, with the exception of Henry Dowd, were still being held in their rooms to await questioning.

"Well, that's that!" Strawn commented with satisfaction. "I gave the newspaper boys the low-down on our suspicions of Sevier, but told them to soft-pedal it; just to say that Sevier was wanted for questioning. They ate up the doctor's story of the running man and the car, and are going to ask the driver of the car to come forward, like a good citizen, and tell anything he knows. . . . Say, young fellow, the lad, what are you grinning about?" He broke off to demand half angrily.

"I was just thinking," Dundee confessed, his eyes twinkling. "How in my ignorance and inexperience I should have gone about this case."

The careful wording did not deceive Strawn. He flushed, then shrugged. "All right! Spill it! How would you have gone about this case?"

"I'm afraid I should have made an awful lot of work for myself and the police department," Dundee admitted ruefully. "I should have begun on the supposition that anyone who lived in this house, or who had ever lived in it, or had taken a meal in it, and had heard the story of a miser with a hidden hoard in her room, was a possible suspect. Greed, you know, is such a universal passion. I believe it is responsible for more crimes than any other motive."

"Well?" Strawn snorted. "Of course, I realize that things look bad for Sevier—provided anyone comes forward to identify him as the man running down the alley." Dundee went on with his disarming smile. "But I can't help remembering, Lieutenant, that everyone in this house knew Emil Sevier had been evicted on Mrs. Hogarth's complaints. That Sevier had just been fired and therefore would be leaving town to look elsewhere for work, and that the police would think of him first as the murderer!"

Strawn looked a little startled at the quiet intensity of his new subordinate's last sentence but he recovered himself quickly and retorted with amused condescension: "You didn't think I was through with my investigation, did you, Son? But I take things as they come, and Sevier happened to come first. I will have that Barker woman in now, since she has the room next door."

"And I also can't help remembering," Dundee went on with that same quiet emphasis, "that everyone in this house knew that Mrs. Hogarth's employment for the prisoners. Opposition to this, he added, was based on the contention that the products of convicts would compete with outside business.

"This is a very selfish opposition," he said. "Products of federal prisons are to be used only by the federal government, and the quantity is too small to me an important factor in competition with private enterprise."

"The federal prison industries should be diversified so that the competition with private enterprise shall not be concentrated on a few industries. Beyond that private industry has no justification for opposition to employment of federal prisoners. It costs the taxpayer large sums to house, clothe and feed federal prisoners. Why should thousands of able-bodied men and women in federal prisons not be required by their labor to help support themselves?"

The attorney General briefly reviewed recent prison riots, including that at the Leavenworth federal penitentiary and said it was due to dissatisfaction with food and lack of work.

Another need of the prison administration, he said, was a better system of parole, upon which the department now is working.

A congressional committee made a survey of the various federal prisons of the country last year and reported that they were greatly over-crowded.

Crude Oil May Yield Trees, Lard, Leather

bureau of standards is conducting experiments in the belief that by products of crude oil may yield substitutes for butter, lard, leather and rubber.

Fatty acids in the oil, the bureau believes, will be the source of butter and lard substitutes, while aromatic hydrocarbons may furnish artificial leather.

Those are only a few of the infinite variety of everyday necessities that the bureau holds to be a part of crude oil. In the fatty acids there may be soaps and edible fats, while the aromatic hydrocarbons may produce in the future plastic acid dyes, perfumes, antiseptics, saccharin and Xylol.

Eventually, too, the scientists may develop artificial rubber tires, drugists' supplies, waterproof clothing, electrical insulation, and cements, not to mention the possibility that substitutes for varnish and linseed oils may be hidden in the elements that make up crude petroleum.

Hope Boy Buried At Ben Lomond Cemetery

Funeral services for William E. Kinard, Jr., 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Kinard of this city, were held Sunday afternoon at Ben Lomond, near Ashdown, with interment in Ben Lomond cemetery.

Young Kinard died Saturday after suffering from several weeks with typhoid fever.

reinforced window screen would be installed Monday, making access to her room from the porch impossible. Unless Cora Barker or someone else has been keeping him informed, Sevier could not have known that the screen was not already in place. Mrs. Hogarth told me she had given Dusty Rhodes the money to buy materials for it nearly a month ago. Also, I heard Mrs. Rhodes say, in the presence of all the boarders and 'meal-ers,' that all screens, including Mrs. Hogarth's would be installed Monday. They are the kind that push up and down, like windows. I noticed the grooves for them in my own window."

"Well?" Strawn barked, as Dundee paused.

The young man shrugged slightly. "It just occurred to me that if the murderer was an inmate of the house, he—or she—would want to do his little job of robbing and murdering before those screens were installed. All the rooms on this floor have windows opening directly upon the stairs opening. Without screens on those windows, any boarder on this floor could step out of a window, creep along the porch to Mrs. Hogarth's window, enter noiselessly, since the windows are low, and steal up on the old lady from behind."

"Once the screens were in, however, the raising of one of the screens might have attracted attention. By the way, I said all the roomers on this floor, because those having rooms on the west side of the house, which has no porch, could gain access to the roof merely by walking across the hall, which is T-shaped, you know, with a window opening directly upon the porch. Naturally a roomer on the third floor could have crept down the stairs to this hall, stepped over the hall window sill, sneaked past Cora Barker's room and on to Mrs. Hogarth's on the front porch. In fact, this house, without screens, is an ideally constructed place, from a robber's viewpoint. If he doesn't care to board here, he can climb the rose trellis on the west end of the front porch, saunter along that porch and enter any room that strikes his fancy."

"Which is exactly what Emil Sevier did," Strawn caught him up stubbornly. "But don't think I'm going to let that preconceived idea of mine as the lawyers put it, keep me from catching a new one if it comes along. The papers used to call me 'Third Degree' Strawn—not that I deserved such a harsh title, of course," he grinned.

He strode to the door. "Boyle! Bring in Miss Barker, and tell Payne to follow orders."

A minute later, Cora Barker, escorted by the patrolman, appeared in the doorway. Through the screen Dundee could see her face, and he almost betrayed his presence by exclaiming in pity.

Stormy Lake's Ire Costs Chicago But City Gains In Diversion Row

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—(AP)—Lake Michigan's first winter storms will cost Chicago millions.

As it ponders the wreckage, however, the city finds cause for a smile, albeit grim, of satisfaction.

For years Chicago has defended itself against claims of other cities that diversion of water through the Chicago river, to carry away pollution, lowered the lake's level.

Chicago things it has won the argument. The first of the recent storms sent the lake two feet above normal and lashed the whole waterfront along a 200-mile stretch on the west and south shores.

As far as the city could tell, Lake Michigan was as high as ever.

Each year Chicago quietly steals a little more of the lake's domain and every winter the booming lake fights to have it back. The attacks this fall were launched with violent northeastern, battering and crushing great concrete breakwaters and costing many lives.

The most spectacular climax of the storm was the loss of 52 men when the car ferry Milwaukee sank with all hands on board.

Chicago's famous outer drives, main traffic arteries leading from the loop district along the lake front, suffered heavily. The north drive will be closed for six months and will cost from $500,000 to $1,000,000 to repair. Other lake fronts were lashed, boats whipped onto land, trees torn out and great sections of concrete promenade ripped out.

At one time waves 20 to 30 feet tall slapped against the "gold coast" until Lake Shore drive, at the edge of the business district was declared unsafe for travel and cars were stopped.

A PAGE of SPORT NEWS

HOKS SLIDES
Henry L. Farrell

Hooks and slides for Monday "Sensational Sports Writing". It must be reluctantly noted that evidence occasionally points to a deliberate policy of sensationalism in athletic news or comment. That is a paragraph from the report of the Carnegie Foundation on American College Athletics. The report, compiled after three years of study, finds athletics in a pretty bad way from commercialism, proselytizing and other defects.

In commenting upon the effects of sensationalism upon the college athlete, the report quotes a writer in the Harvard Graduate Magazine, "A schoolboy finds his photograph and a sketch of his life put before the public, and he is described as a future star. The consequence is that the first few weeks which ought to be spent in developing him into a player, are spent in reducing what is the natural result of his publicity, a 'swelled head'."

Oh, Yes, Certainly
We are not inclined to disagree with the findings of the Foundation in-condition of their teams.

For instance the old annual headline, "Stagg Fears Purdue" was printed whether or not Stagg actually did tremble at mention of the Boilermakers. And Gil Dobie of Cornell always has been extremely dubious about the chances of his team's winning a game. Halfback Bull McGourty is hurt and may not play, it is said before the game, but Bull actually plays and scores five touchdowns against dear old Siwash.

But, the Thrills!

It may be true that writeups concerning a budding star may cause his ears to pop out a bit, but if he's inclined to let his head grow, it will grow, whether he ever gets any publicity or not.

There have been sensational stories about football games. Perhaps a great many of them have been overdone. But in perhaps no other sport is there such a field for the thrilling and the unexpected. There is no denying that college athletics furnish the thrills to write about.

What writer could pass up the great chance offered when a green Harvard player, in the last little minute of play, shoots through the October dusk a 55-yard forward pass into the arms of a waiting Crimson man for a touchdown that slaves off defeat?

A Few Others

How can any sport writer south of the Mason-Dixon line keep his wits when a Georgia eleven, beaten by Oglethorpe, rallies to crush a cocky Yale team and goes on to smash North Carolina, after North Carolina has defeated the mighty Georgia Tech?

Is there some way a sports writer can play down the great deeds of Captain Glasgow of Iowa, running wild through a touted Illinois team—A Glasgow with an iron mask on his face to keep his broken nose in place?

Shall we devise some utterly prosaic way of writing up the come back fight of Roy Riegels of California, after the mistake that cost his team one of the year's most important battles?

These are only high spots, gathered from here and there—a few excuses, if you will, for the sensationalism that occasionally creeps into sports pages.

Masked Hawk

Illinois gridgers got three distinct shocks in the tilt with Iowa, dedicating the University of Iowa's new stadium recently. They were surprised to behold the "Man in the Iron Mask," above, as they lined up for the kickoff. The surprise turned to alarm when they discovered that the features behind the mask were those of Willis Glasgow, Hawkeye captain and halfback, whose broken cheek bone, so the newspapers said, would prevent him from participating in the

Last Fight of Season Slated for Friday Night This Week

Leavelle Announces Current Card Will Be Last He Will Stage for A While—Meets Montgomery In Ten Round Final.

Tex Leavelle announces today that following the fight Friday night at his Third street ring he will close the place for a while and that there will be no more boxing shows here unless some one else cares to promote them.

And just to leave fans with a taste for more he has lined for the Friday night show a rattling good card, introducing two new faces and several already well known here.

Leavelle himself goes on in the finale for a ten-round bout with Harry Montgomery, heavyweight who is climbing the ladder up toward the station where the top-notchers roost. As a semifinal Ralph Taylor, local high school boy, steps over eight hurdles with Billy Kelly, junior welter accompanying Montgomery here. Kelly is by way of being an old hand at the game and will likely prove a lively handfull for the local mitt.

The third shock—and what a shock it was, too—almost caused a panic, for on the first play after the opening kickoff this same Mr. Glasgow, the "Man in the Iron Mask," slithered through a gap in the Illinois forward wall and snaked his way 78 yards down the field to a touchdown.

Then Joe Causey, who stuck his chin—accidentally—in front of Taylor's left last Friday night, will be on again, arguing things with Johnny Celmers. It may be said right here that Mr. Causey doesn't know anything about lefts until he gets in front of one of Celmers. Then he will. And how.

Other preliminaries are being arranged. Leavelle planning to give fans here more action in a shorter time and for less money than they've been offered before.

His condition is not serious, it was said, and he expects to be up and about again in a few days. Since winning the world series Mack has attended many functions in his honor.

Sons of Stagg, Yost, McGugin Play

Taking first steps toward emulating their illustrious fathers, Paul Stagg, Fielding H. Yost, jr., and Dan McGugin, jr., are playing college football this season.

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—(AP)—Sons of three of America's greatest football coaches are playing college football this year.

Paul Stagg, son of Coach A. Alonzo Stagg, is varsity quarterback at Chicago.

Dan McGugin, Jr., son of Coach Dan McGugin, is a reserve guard at Vanderbilt.

Fielding H. Yost, Jr., whose father coached Michigan to many "Big Ten" titles, is a reserve halfback at North Carolina.

Young Stagg, a sophomore, has been Chicago's field general all season.

McGugin, Jr., a junior, was eligible for varsity duty in 1928 but postponed his gridiron debut to concentrate on his studies. As a result his scholastic average surpassed those of all freshman and varsity candidates. He is a guard.

Young Yost, known on the North Carolina campus as "Buck" won his numeral as a halfback on the freshman team last season. He rates as a "comer" on the Tar Heel squad.

Behind The Scenes As Market Crashed

Feverish Activity, But Not Panic, Grips Interior of Stock Exchange, Busy Brokers Haven't Time to Tear Their Hair

Fortunes were being wiped out, millions lost hourly, financial disaster threatened. . . . The picture above, of the floor of the New York Stock Exchange, was sketched by George Clark, staff artist for The Star and NEA Service, while the greatest speculative crash in financial history was at its height. Traders are shown milling about the oval-shaped "posts" where the nation's leading stocks are bought and sold. In the background, upper center, can be seen a giant ticker-tape, moving behind glass, which gives the market quotations. No photographs of the interior of the exchange ever are allowed and visitors were barred from the gallery during the frenzied trading.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1—At the entrance of the New York Stock Exchange, Jake—the carnation man who decorates the buttonholes of a thousand Wall Street traders—contemplated sadly his stock of left-overs.

Generally he is sold out before noon, and about 80 per cent of the lapels on "the floor" are decorated with a bright posy. Now one could count the boutonnières. Thus, even before entering the squat gray building, one of the sinister off-stage notes could be found in the brusque manner with which most everyone brushed by. In their terrific haste they were forgetting completely a custom which raised Jake from the status of a shine boy to that of an affluent flower merchant. Everyone was too busy to think of traditions.

For it was a typical day during the worst of the great stock slump. And the scene therein is one which is denied even to the eyes of the New Yorker. The average man who has been hit or missed by the costly break has little conception of the changes which have come into "the market" since it grew from a million-share-day institution into an arena which found something like eight million shares dumping into its lap.

Curious Are Barred To begin with, the ominous note reflected at the doorway was repeated by the super-cavitation of the array of guards sprinkled through the hallways. The visitors' gallery was that in these trying days the usual curious ones were to be barred. Where usually 50 or more persons hung on, now only a guard wandered back and forth.

As he paced restlessly by, the giant tape which crawls across a huge glass cage registered a few stock symbols and a few numerals.

"There goes $30,000,000," said the attendant. The tape slowly continued its revolutions. A few more millions wiped out—and then a few more. Before night it would record losses into the billions.

With such financial disaster in the air, one would expect to find some sign of panic upon the floor. Thanks to the movies and certain fictions, there in a nation that traders tear off their ties and their shirts and become slightly mad. Such things may have happened. But not at a time when the bulls are coming in faster than they can be filled and when the ticker is hours behind itself. Then the "exchange" becomes a fluttering world of notebooks, with a vast army of men scribbling at fever heat.

They haven't time to tear off coats or paw the air. They're too busy recording changes and keeping in touch with the brokerage firms they represent.

It requires something like 1100 martinettes to help them in this task. Of these, 700 are page boys and 300 are phone boys. The phone boys stick to a series of parallel cubby-holes, like booths in a drug store. The pages wear uniforms with symbols on their sleeves—for there are quotation boys, squad boys, tube boys and floor reporters. They are the go-betweeners for the hectic figures which fairly jam the vast space.

When they are wanted, signals flash or in the form of huge numbers on a giant board. Each man on the floor has his particular number. If he decides to leave for a quick smoke, the trader leaves a boy to watch for his call number.

Expensive Smoking There is a rule against smoking on the floor. The fine is $25. But such has been the nerve strain that some gladly pay the money for the privilege of a cigaret. One member, who most meticulously follows the code in ordinary times, so forgot himself that he had spent $225 in fines in a single morning. To give proper ar-to the vast throng ozone is now pumped in by means of a mechanical process.

It is now necessary for a "boy" to memorize scores of new numbers and be able to take an examination on them—due to the large number of "S2 brokers" that have cropped up in the last year. A "S2 broker" is the slang term for a man who can buy a seat on the exchange without having a firm behind him.

Free Lunches Are Busy Hundreds of them being new to "the floor," they wear large buttons with their numbers and names on them so that the page boys will not get confused. They are further identified by colored squares attached to the call board which differentiates their numbers from those of the broker's agents.

For them it is a temporary bonanza time. For their commissions come in whether a sale or a purchase has been made. And the agents of some of the biggest firms have been so flooded with orders that a huge "overflow" business has gone to the free-lancers.

One newcomer found an order for 70,000 shares in his hand before he could stop to ask questions. The commission on this alone was sufficient to buy him a nice home in the country. This sort of thing has been common.

79, She's Jailed as Bootlegger

Liquor law enforcement officials in Memphis, Tenn., last night kept Mrs. Emma Knott, 79, above, in jail. Taken to jail last night, she has been arrested on liquor law violations. It is said that she made beer to serve her husband a custom which she followed for many years and each time Memphisians reported the bootlegging, she was let go.

What Stock Market Did to $25,000,000,000

Gleaned from the welter of frantic selling and hysterical panic in the New York stock market, the cold facts and figures graphically presented above tell the story of the amazing decline in speculative values of securities. The two reay black lines at the left show the range of prices through 1928 and the first nine months of 1929. From October 7, the daily trend is indicated. Daily volume of sales, in millions of shares, is shown in the lower part of the chart. Note where, on Thursday, October 24—the maddest day in the history of the exchange—nearly 13,000,000 shares were dumped, while prices tumbled. Counting sales on the Curb, more than 19,000,000 shares were disposed of, representing a speculative loss of $11,250,000,000. After a brief rally, the decline in prices continued, and a new low is found on Monday—a loss of about $14,000,000,000—with sales again skyrocketing. The short bars once a week represent the two-hour sessions on Saturday.
